Trouble in paradise

Olivia Wilde and Harry Styles seem to have decided to go separate ways as many surces confirm that the two have broken up after two years of being a couple. This news don't come as a surprise since they were rarely seen together lately.

Franky Speaking By Olivia Bella

Marbella Film School students had the opportunity to portray their talents in a new thriller, produced and shot entirely in Marbella.

“Room 4D”, is an IOSCAPE STUDIO and MARBELLA INTERNATIONAL PICTURES collaboration, written and directed by Tony Bianchi and produced by Franky Lankester - who plays a significant role in the film. Sarah Spendlove is cast as the lead, playing Dr Charlotte Goettling. Her half-sister is played by Nicole Moerland, director of Marbella Film School.

In addition to Sarah as the lead actress, most of the students from the school were cast to fill various roles in the production. There are also cameo appearances made by established actor Damian Chapa (Blood In, Blood Out).

“Room 4D” is certainly set to shine, already receiving many industry accolades. It has been screened during the Marbella International Film Festival a few months ago.

Q & A with the producer Franky Lankester:

• Why did you choose Marbella as the filming location?

The costa del Sol's stunning and diverse locations make it a suitable place for all types of films. Living here in beautiful Marbella made our choice even more evident. We could not be more grateful for the support from local authorities and businesses.

I recall meeting our Mayor in London about four years ago and having a conversation about filmmaking in Marbella.

She asked me: “Franky, why are they always making Gangster films about Marbella?”

Her question got me thinking, and I knew I had to do something completely different. So I did, and “ROOM 4D” was born.

• What inspired you to be part of this production?

A few years ago a girl went missing after a night out in a club in Marbella. Sadly, she was taken by predators and has not been found since.

Having two daughters myself, it's the worst thing you can imagine to happen to your children. Hence, Tony Bianchi - the writer and director - and I were inspired to create a relevant and captivating story that takes place in Marbella. Our goal was to develop a feature film working exclusively with a local cast and crew.

• How was your experience working with Marbella Film School?

I've known Nicole for an extensive time and we aimed to get all the students involved in the project. We were thrilled to see all the new talents emerge: they all provided a fantastic performance.

• Can you tell us about your favourite moments during filming?

Every project has plenty of memorable moments. The production is usually taking you to locations you wouldn't normally go, anywhere from the most beautiful to most peculiar places. There is often a sense of adventure and excitement. In addition, you have the chance to meet a lot of new people who share the same interests.

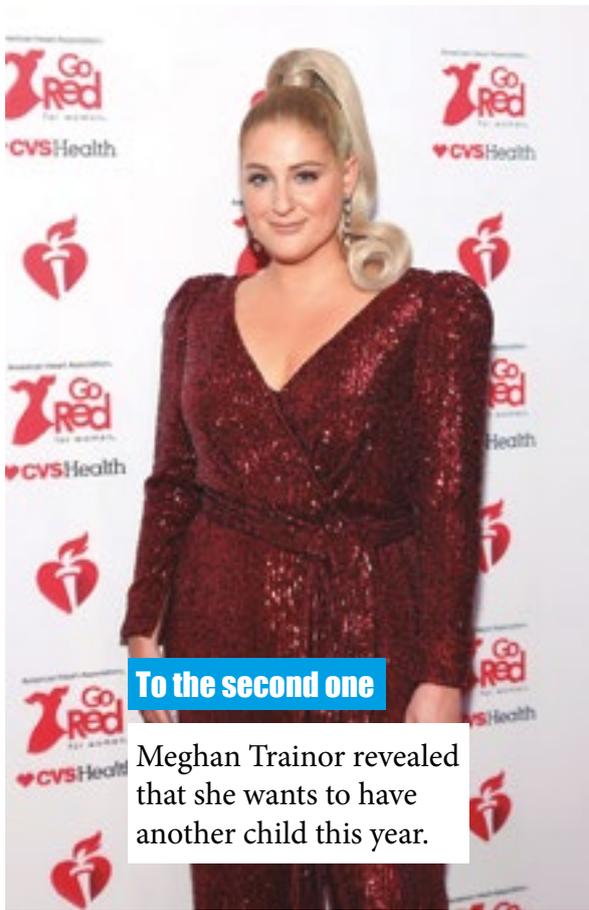

• What are your plans for the film?
“Room 4D” has been selected and screened at the Marbella International Film Festival and was screened a few months ago.

Following this, we have several meetings planned to get the right distributors as well as looking into presenting our film at other festivals too.

We are sharing refuser updates on our Instagram page:
@marbella.internationalpictures
& @frankylankester

To the second one

Meghan Trainor revealed that she wants to have another child this year.

The it hair color

Bella Hadid has chosen her hair to be the it color right now: strawberry blonde.

Fashionable reusing

Kate Winslet wore this previously seen silvery dress for the Avatar premiere.

Gotham city siren

Lady Gaga was spotted at the set of an upcoming film portraying Harley Quinn.

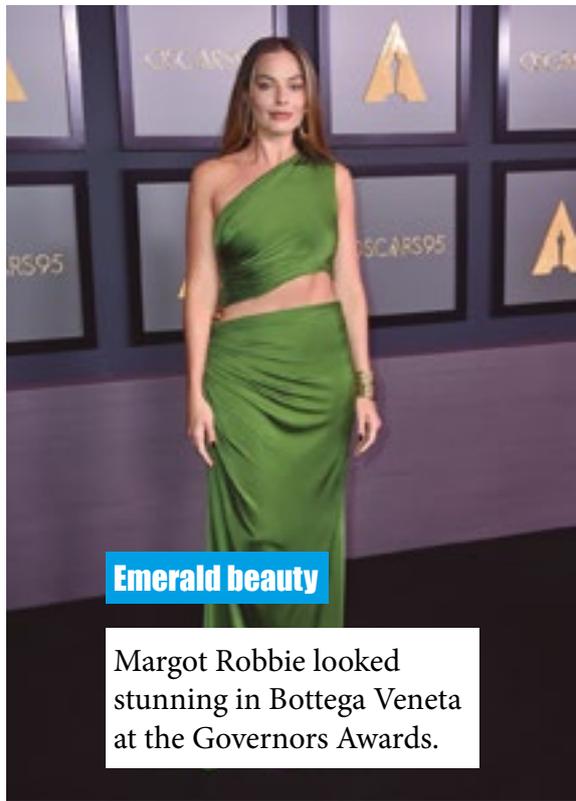

Ambitious project

After the premiere of the sequel of Avatar, 'The Way of Water', numbers have been made. The revenue for the first two weeks were a total of $1 billion, making it a huge success. Nonetheless, the costs of making and promoting said project ascend to $2 billion, so producers are still watching closely to break that number.

Family time

Rihanna and ASAP Rocky have been more public with their baby recently, posting him on social media and being seen enjoying family moments on the beach. They welcomed their son not even a year ago, so they seem to still be very focused on being good first-time parents. In regards to music, RiRi has not made any announcements apart from the super bowl half time show scheduled for this spring.

Emerald beauty

Margot Robbie looked stunning in Bottega Veneta at the Governors Awards.

Dangerous garment

Machine Gun Kelly was a shocker in this spiked suit for the AMAs.

Mid-concert injuries

Singer Florence Welch from Florence and the Machine had to cancel her UK tour due to a broken foot. Fans have been deeply affected but rescheduling of the concerts are being made. These venues were part of the band's successful 'Dance Fever' world tour.

Game, Set, and Match?

With about 320 sunny days per year on the Costa del Sol, it is not a surprise that outdoor sports enthusiasts are thriving. Marbella is considered to be the Golf Capital of Europe and we focused on Golf in one of our recent articles. This time the spotlight is on the hugely popular sports of Tennis and Padel and the 3 most common types of injuries suffered.

Number 1: Tennis Elbow

This is the most common injury in Tennis. It can hurt not just around the elbow but also into the forearm and on occasions into the upper arm. Certain movements like lifting, twisting or gripping with the hand can increase the pain. The pain can be from mild to absolutely excruciating. A correct diagnosis is important to differentiate between Lateral Epicondylitis, Medial Epicondylitis, Radial Tunnel Syndrome, Cervical Nerve Root involvement or any other muscular or ligamentous issues. If you are wearing an elbow strap and it is increasing your pain, there is a good chance that a nerve is involved. A good clinician will also differentiate between mechanical or chemical sources of pain and establish the cause of the injury including the possibility of having the wrong grip size on your racket.

Let's focus on the most common injury out of the above selection, the epicondylitis. The injured tissue in Epicondylitis is a tendon, and when a tendon is inflamed, it is called Tendinitis. This might come from a one-off overload of the forearm muscles, or from repetitive micro-trauma, that eventually lead to injury. During the acute inflamed state, there will be increased blood flow to the muscle and tendon, some swelling and heat, which is the body's response to heal the injury. We might only be half aware of what is going on and experience "a bit of pain" for a few days during which it heals. However, we would not need to write about "Tennis Elbow" if it was that easy. Often, Tendinitis fails to heal alone. There are several reasons why this might be the case, one of which is re-injury when over-exercising or from additional mechanical stressors such as manual work or typing. At this point, our body's immune system has moved on to other areas in the body, and stopped actively working on the injury. Now the tendinitis has become a tendinosis or degenerative tendinopathy with a lack of natural healing response, and you recognize that it is just not getting any better. If you are in any of these stages it is then time to get in touch with us so we can help.

Number 2: Rotator Cuff injuries and shoulder pain

The shoulder joint is the most mobile joint in the body, giving us a great range of movement. This mobility comes at a cost, and that is stability. Strong shoulder muscles with the correct muscle ratio are a must for tennis players. Most movements in tennis and padel are bringing the arm forcefully forward or downward, which is brought about by the muscles at the front of the chest and arm. If tennis or padel are the only exercises that one does, the muscles at the back of the shoulder and arm are "weaker" in comparison (or ratio). This leads to the shoulder joint to be pulled forward, and it loses the congruent position within. This brings stress into the joint, its cartilage and the rotator cuff, leading to impingement syndromes and potentially leading to tears and degeneration. Remember the information about tendinitis in Tennis Elbow? For those that do not know, the rotator cuff in the shoulder is made up by four tendons, and any overload can lead to tendinitis and eventually to the more stubborn tendinosis. The tendon most commonly involved in tennis shoulder injuries is the Supraspinatus tendon. A good clinician as well as treating the injury will also help with rehabilitation to correct muscle ratios, posture and muscle recruitment patterns (this is to do with how the shoulder blade and the arm bone move in synchrony).

Number 3: Back pain

This is the third most common injury that players might experience. A thorough examination will be needed as low back pain can be complex and multi-factorial. There are many tissues that can be involved, including muscles, joints (vertebrae), ligaments, discs and even nerves. Ergonomics in tennis and padel can also play a huge role in back pain and correcting certain aspects can make all the difference. This includes looking at the back extension when serving and little things like how to pick up the ball from the ground.

We hope these tips help, so you can continue playing the sport you love.

Little things are BIG

January. Another year begins and we are overwhelmed by that dizzy feeling that time goes by so fast. That's why, as a New Year's resolution, we invite you to stop. To pay attention to those little details, because sometimes we are in such a hurry that we forget what is really essential: the little things.

It's still getting dark early, and we have a bit of an emotional hangover after Christmas. After a long working day, you get home and luckily you have some time to yourself. The smell of the neighbour's freshly baked cake overwhelms you. A hot shower, you slip into your favourite pyjamas and Michael Kiwanuka is playing in the background. You sink into the sofa with a fluffy blanket, light a fragrant candle and looking at the shadows drawn on the wall of a beautiful sculpture, you feel that everything seems to make sense. Dear Hygge, you have reappeared.

And some of you may ask, what is Hygge? Hygge is a Danish and Norwegian word, difficult to translate, that encompasses a concept of a cosy, intimate mood, with feelings of well-being and contentment. Basically, it is something we all want; an atmosphere that is pleasant and in tune with you, that inspires and in which you feel yourself.

We are taught to design spaces with intelligence, precision and taste, but sometimes we forget to put a lot of love and care into things.

That is why there are spaces that work and shine, and others that don't, and when you don't quite understand why, the main reason is usually that details have been neglected, since their function is to unify everything, create harmony, give it life, essence and character.

It is not an easy task, and we recommend that whether due to lack of time, knowledge or comfort, you turn to professionals because it is something that really makes a difference.

At Lord Designs we love to create environments that invite, inspire and make you fall in love, taking into account factors, apparently basic, but often overlooked, that are what really make a place a home.

So, without further ado, let's get down to business, and roughly analyse some of these principles.

Everything in its place

Visual order generates peace of mind. It is essential to feel in harmony.

To do this, the main thing is to know your needs well and study the functionality of the elements of the house, from the furniture to the accessories. Every detail should have a purpose.

Sorting by colour and size is relatively easy to do and to maintain, we're sure it will make your day-to-day life easier.

For clients who prefer neutral colours and books generate a lot of visual noise, here's a trick on how to sort them upside down to maintain a nice neutral colour palette. We love it!

Rivertown Lodge, Hudson, New York.

We recommend taking advantage of unused space in the house to store the less aesthetically pleasing items. In addition, we are in favour of investing in small elements such as small boxes or pretty containers to create a harmonious decorative sensation.

The Alhambra Hill club, a project by Lord Designs.

It is also important to accept that we are not perfect and that sometimes it is difficult to keep everything as we would like it to be. The key is to start from a good base adapted to your needs and from there, give yourself time and patience and create little by little a system that works for you. Your home is there to be enjoyed!

Accessories

Accessories play a very important role in taking a space to the next level. Aromatic candles that play with our senses, blankets that bring warmth or a stylish and suggestive work of art.

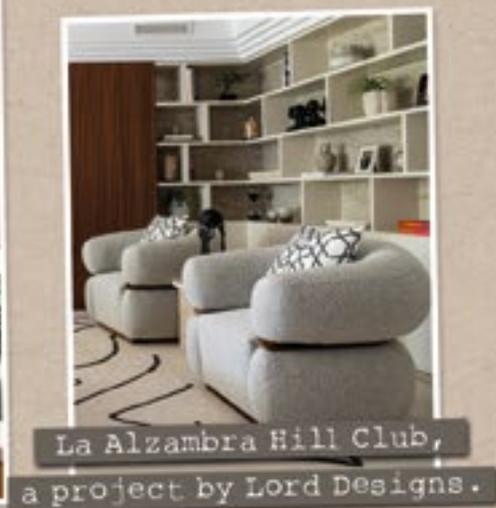

By combining elements that have a practical and decorative function, you will achieve balance and, ideally, functional objects that are aesthetically interesting.

When we make a composition of accessories in a space, their arrangement is not fortuitous. It is not enough for the elements to be beautiful; they have to cohere in some way. There are studies and rules that help to create more natural and dynamic environments, such as, for example, playing with symmetry or creating groups of 3.

The important thing in groups of 3 is that the relationship between the elements is noticeable, either because they share at least one characteristic (colour, material, texture, style) or because of their proximity in space. Odd compositions make the human eye seek to locate the centre and therefore the elements do not go unnoticed.

Texture and prints

One way to make a space unique, with small touches that we really love, is through textiles and wallpapers.

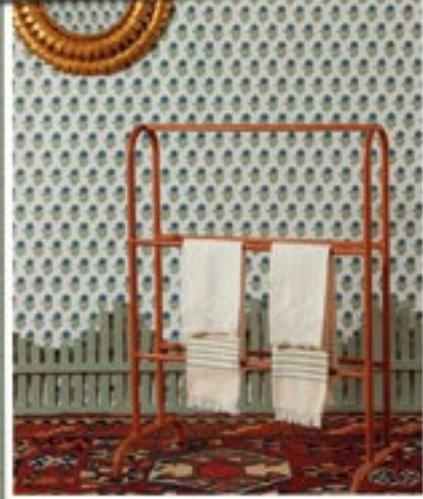

Thanks to them, we can create the most attractive and eclectic superimpositions. They will instantly infuse the room with character and personality.

Mixing textures with these Zinc fabrics
- Available to order directly from Lord Designs.

Keeping the same colour palette but in different textures will provide different sensations without generating a big impact, showing a softer and more intimate side.

Country style wallpapers and fabrics, on the left Anna French, and on the right Lorenzo Castillo for Gaston and Daniela both available to order directly from lord designs.

Contrasted with natural materials and soft textiles, we can bring the countryside into the city with this cosy and quirky country-chic style.

Themed bedroom suite "Marismas" in Hotel Claude, Marbella, Project by Lord Designs.

And so on, we could go on numbering different little things that can make big changes, because spaces are more complex than you might think, and for them to have their own light, you must consider much more than you usually think. We have a long year ahead of us, full of opportunities and incredible moments to experience. So, if you decide that one of your new year's projects is to improve or create your home, we will be happy to accompany you on this exciting journey.

It's going to be a great one!

LAMBORGHINI URUS PERFORMANTE

Raising the bar on the Super SUV

- The new benchmark for Super SUV 'fun to drive' performance
- New level of lightweight, aerodynamic design and sportier driving dynamics
- Lower, wider, lighter by 47 kg with increased power of 666 CV: the new reference for weight-to-power ratio in a Super SUV
- Acceleration 0-100 km/h in 3.3 seconds and top speed of 306 km/h
- Specific drive mode calibrations and new RALLY mode for dirt tracks

Ahead of its premiere the Urus Performante set a new record in the production SUV category on the Pikes Peak International Hill Climb Road, crossing the finish line at 4302 meters (14,115 ft) in 10:32.064 and beating the previous 2018 record of 10:49.902.

“The Urus Performante takes the supreme performance and distinctive looks of Lamborghini’s ground-breaking Super SUV to the next level, retaining its luxurious versatility and delivering the most engaging driving experience: not only on road but in every environment, distinguished through an alluring design that denotes new benchmarks for driving dynamism in what is already a remarkable car,” says Stephan Winkelmann, Lamborghini Chairman and CEO. “The Urus set a new standard at its launch, taking Lamborghini’s design DNA and technological talent and delivering the world’s first Super SUV for a new era: the Urus Performante sets the bar even higher for the SUV segment.”

New steel springs lower the Performante’s chassis by 20 mm, with a wheel track that is broader by 16 millimeters, over which wider carbon fiber wheel arches embrace new optional 23” or forged 22” lightweight wheels with titanium bolts and specially developed Pirelli tires.

The Performante’s power is increased by 16 CV to 666 CV, and its weight reduced by 47 kg, giving it a best-in-class weight-to-power ratio of 3,2. Accelerating from 0-100 km/h in just 3.3 seconds, and braking from 100 km to standstill in 32.9 m.

BMW M3 TOURING

BMW M is adding a new body variant to its line-up of high-performance models in the premium midsize class. The first-ever BMW M3 Touring combines authentic motor sport feeling with a very distinct character and a broader spread of practical qualities. Its powertrain technology is focused wholly on delivering beguiling performance and brings together the 375 kW/510 hp version of the six-cylinder in-line engine with M TwinPower Turbo technology, the eight-speed M Steptronic transmission with Drivelogic and the M xDrive all-wheel-drive system. The latest addition to the range is therefore available exclusively in BMW M3 Competition Touring with M xDrive form (fuel consumption combined: 10.4 – 10.1 l/100 km [27.2 – 28.0 mpg imp]).

The variable-use interior of the first BMW M3 Touring gives it a distinctive character profile, providing fresh scope for experiencing M-typical performance in everyday use. The new BMW iDrive including BMW Curved Display brings cutting-edge control/operation and connectivity tech to the cabin.

Orders for the new BMW M3 Touring started in September 2022, ahead of a market launch that will get underway with the start of production in November 2022.

ABOUT MARBELLA MAGAZINE / 69

STANDALONE VEHICLE CONCEPT WITH EXTRAVAGANT DESIGN.

HIGH-REVVING SIX-CYLINDER IN-LINE ENGINE.

The first BMW M3 Touring goes to particularly impressive lengths to deliver on the traditional M promise of dynamic flair, agility and precision combined with unrestricted everyday practicality and mile-covering ability. Extravagant exterior design shines a particularly vivid spotlight on its unique vehicle concept, ensuring clear differentiation within the lineup and a dynamic aura unmatched by any rival.

Whatever exterior colour is specified for the BMW M3 Touring, its roof will be finished as standard in Black high-gloss. The standard roof rails and the model-specific Gurney air-directing flap on the roof spoiler are painted in the same shade. The roof can also be finished in body colour as an option, and an M Carbon exterior package can also be found on the options list.

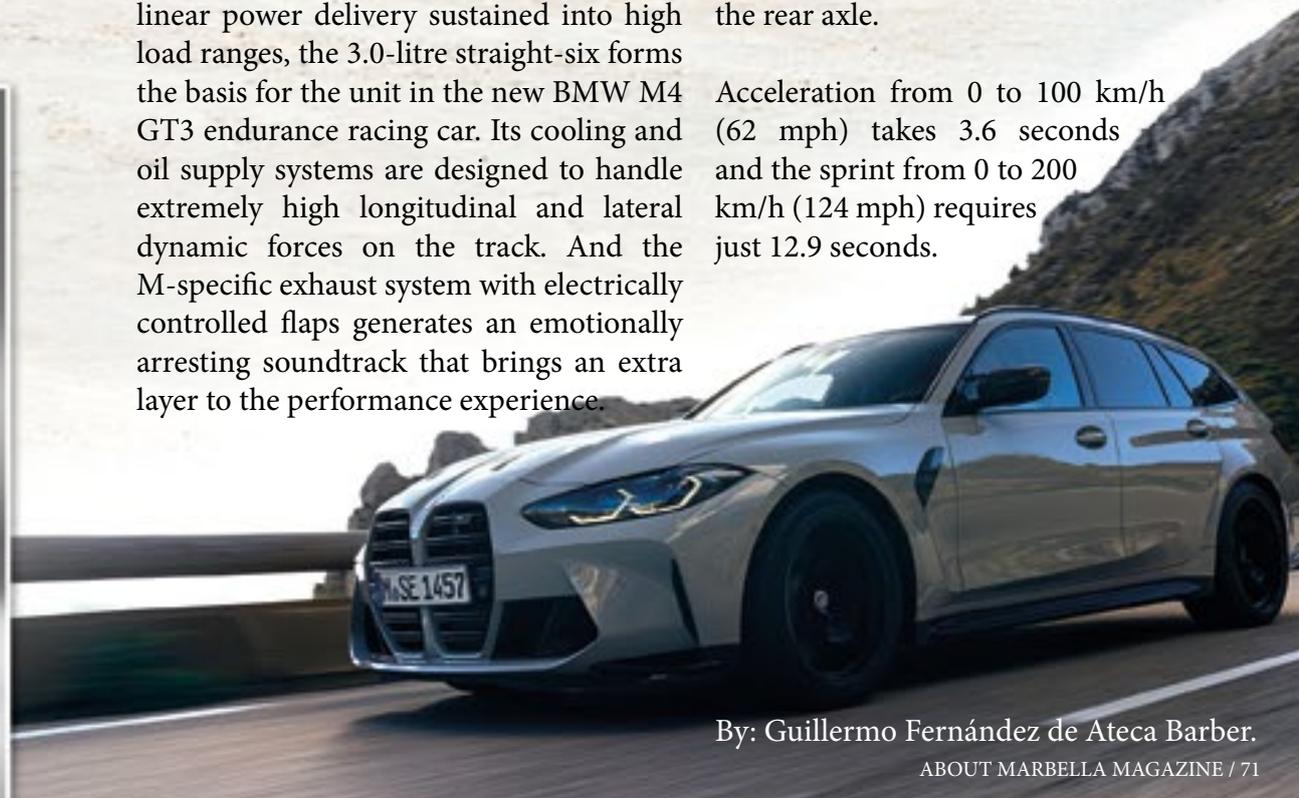

Cleanly designed surfaces and athletic forms signal the standout performance potential of the BMW M3 Touring, as do the M-specific design cues firmly invested in the functional requirements of cooling air routing and aerodynamic balance. Chief among these are the vertically arranged, frameless BMW kidney grille, large side air intakes, powerfully sculpted wheel arches and prominently extended side skirts which, together with the attachment parts for the front and rear aprons, form a Black high-gloss band around the whole of the car. Other distinctive features are the M gills in the front side panels and the exhaust tailpipes integrated into the rear apron to the left and right of centre.

The version of the six-cylinder in-line engine with M TwinPower Turbo technology developed for the Competition models in the BMW M3/M4 line-up produces maximum output of 375 kW/510 hp and peak torque of 650 Nm (479 lb-ft). Distinguished by the appetite for revs for which M engines are renowned, plus linear power delivery sustained into high load ranges, the 3.0-litre straight-six forms the basis for the unit in the new BMW M4 GT3 endurance racing car. Its cooling and oil supply systems are designed to handle extremely high longitudinal and lateral dynamic forces on the track. And the M-specific exhaust system with electrically controlled flaps generates an emotionally arresting soundtrack that brings an extra layer to the performance experience.

The engine joins forces with an eight-speed M Steptronic transmission with Drivelogic, which offers three gearshift programs and can be operated using shift paddles on the steering wheel. The engine's power is channelled through to the road via the M xDrive all-wheel-drive system, which teams up with the Active M Differential at the rear axle.

Acceleration from 0 to 100 km/h (62 mph) takes 3.6 seconds and the sprint from 0 to 200 km/h (124 mph) requires just 12.9 seconds.
